An Advice

In that way the organization will be better.

I think AOT is a lot like Game of Thrones in its quality. The first half of the series was great, season 1–4 of Game of Thrones and season 1 and 2 of Attack on Titan.

That first half had great elements to it. The tension of the situation was maintained and amplified by the seriousness and dread portrayed of death and titans. It had great fights that made sense and a whole world to explore and elaborate. However then the third quarter was made, season 5–6 of Game of Thrones and season 3 of Attack on Titan, and the quality of writing and world building began to go down. I will not elaborate but it did go down in terms of world building and story. In my opinion, the fights were still pretty good and the story still had many qualities I saw in the first half. Finally the last quarter, season 7–8 of Game of Thrones and season 4 of Attack on Titan, and the story takes a massive ascending in terms of quality.

In conclusion, There are mix reactions of people regarding this anime but most of them are totally in love with the anime but there are some critics and it's totally fine. Overall yes I do think it is one of the great ending in the history of animes.
